

Wittnich Marine Animal Rescue Grant (WMAR grant)

Background

The Oceanographic Environmental Research Society (OERS) is committed to saving the marine environment through rescue, rehabilitation and education. This will be accomplished by procuring equipment and training volunteers to help rescue marine animals trapped in environmental disasters, building facilities to rehabilitate these animals for release back into their natural environment and educating the general public to minimize the amount of damage done to the marine environment. OERS has created a granting system that makes available funds in forms of grants to various groups primarily within Canada and internationally to be used for the charitable activities as outlined in this proposal. Due to federal regulations, an OERS representative must be on hand during these funded activities.

The funds are allocated by a granting committee composed of various individuals who have a vast amount of granting experience.
